She always had a thimble for the sick or needy and did she could to make life more bearable for the suffering or distressed. Like most people of advanced years in the latter part of her life, her mind dwelt much on the past, she took great interest in covering old times. She had a lively memory of striking events, also noted people who have long been dead, and read with keenest interest all published historical matter relating to both county and its people. She was a woman of firmness of character, kindly and devoted to her friends, sharing generously with her neighbors and taking an unselfish interest in their welfare. John Tischer has a bird-hunting bitch belonging to J. B. Goodpastor. The bitch has nine young pups, which she carried under the floor of an outbuilding where a hen was setting. The hen promptly adopted the pups and scratches for them, hovers them and endeavors otherwise to rear them as she would a brood of chickens. She may be seen hovering them while they are nursing their mother.
